PRIVATE DIE MATCH STAMPS

The extraordinary demands of the Civil War on the Federal Treasury resulted in Congress passing the Revenue Act of 1862. The government provided revenue stamps to be affixed to boxes or packages of matches, and to proprietary medicines, perfumery and playing cards, as well as documents.

Manufacturers were permitted, at their expense, to have dies engraved and plates made for their exclusive use. Many were only too willing to do so because a discount of 5% to 10% was allowed on orders from the die, which often made it possible to undersell competitors. Also, the considerable advertising value of the stamps could not be overlooked.

The face value of the stamp used on matches was determined by the number, i.e. 1c for each 100 matches or fraction thereof. The stamp tax was repealed in July 1883.

Scott RO112a(CF1)

According to the Feb. 20, 1875 issue of The American Journal of Philately, in 1865 Benoni Howard became proprietor of New York Match Co. on 42nd Street, which was one of the largest such companies. Howard was known as a highly principled person, whose honesty was never questioned. He bought $700,000 worth of revenue stamps, with a contract that allowed him a certain percentage on these drawbacks.

By his reckoning the government did not follow through on their part of the contract, and he vowed to get even. The government noted his purchases of stamps dropped precipitously, so they raided his establishment after seeing unstamped boxes in the marketplace. His business was broken up and his factory was shut.

About a year later, a fisherman in the East River found a printing plate covered with wax with Howard's name on it, and also the name of the plate's manufacturer. The police secured the plate, and the maker betrayed Howard and implicated him as the forger. He was sentenced to five years of hard labor.

The extraordinary demands of the Civil War on the Federal Treasury resulted in Congress passing the Revenue Act of 1862. The government provided revenue stamps to be affixed to boxes or packages of matches, and to proprietary medicines, perfumery and playing cards, as well as documents.

Manufacturers were permitted, at their expense, to have dies engraved and plates made for their exclusive use. Many were only too willing to do so because a discount of 5% to 10% was allowed on orders from the die, which often made it possible to undersell competitors. Also, the considerable advertising value of the stamps could not be overlooked.

Dr. M. A. Simmons

The Dr. Simmons stamps were originally engraved and printed with the Iuka inscription. After the firm moved to St. Louis, the inscription was changed. The "Iuka" stamps were normally printed on silk paper, and the "St. Louis" stamps on Bureau watermarked paper. The "Iuka" on watermarked paper is a great rarity. Richard Friedberg offers the theory that the first supply delivered by the Bureau was printed with the "Iuka" inscription, and that Simmons returned the stamps with a request to change the address to St. Louis.
